Help us to Protect Your Customer Base

The British Aggregates Association, BAA, was formed in 1999 to provide an effective voice for the UK's independent SME quarry companies. Due to the recession, the UK quarry industry has had a tough time of late; however this also had an effect on our suppliers.

The quarry industry depends heavily on good quality, on time and reliable service providers and suppliers. We are therefore keen to develop strong links with reputable organisations. All companies interested in supplying our industry can now become associate BAA members.

This low cost option opens up a two way process with quarry operators all over the UK. In return for a modest membership fee, details of services on offer are circulated to BAA members on a regular basis. Associate members are also provided with an extensive contact list to get them to the right person. Tailored assistance can also be provided for companies wishing to launch new and innovative products. Associate members will be listed on the BAA website and permitted to use the BAA logo on their stationery and vehicles. Many associate members already showcase their products at the BAA AGM where an unparalleled gathering of industry decision makers is always present.

By helping to support the UK quarry industry you will therefore be investing wisely in the future of your own company.

We hope that you will join us – please see overleaf for an application form.

Kind Regards,

Robert Durward
